In Scotland the Church continues to make wonderful progress. Monsignor Fraser, in announcing the Pope's interest and blessing at a meeting of the Catholic Truth Society, said he had assured the Holy Father a short time ago that the Scottish Catholics were organized and bringing Catholic claims before the minds of their fellow-countrymen. Noble churches were rising all over the land, schools and great seminaries, nurseries of the future priesthood of Scotland. While a steady stream of converts were returning to the faith of their fathers, Catholicity was permeating Protestantism itself, and its doctrines were preach-
